Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 20 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Some rain for Scotland and Northern Ireland but mostly dry.

Today:
Cloudy in the west and north with some mostly light rain for Scotland and Northern Ireland. Colder conditions with brighter skies and some showers arriving in the far north. England and Wales seeing sunny spells and dry for the majority.

Tonight:
Frost for the far north with wintry showers for Shetland. Patchy rain sinking south across northern England. Fairly cloudy ahead of this with some fog in the east and south.

Wednesday:
Fine but cold for Scotland, Northern Ireland and northern England. Cloudier than recent days in the south but still dry for most. A few heavy showers in the southwest.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Mostly dry and fine with variable cloud cover, the best of the brightness across western parts. After frosty starts temperatures recover to near average by day. Windy in the southwest.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.